

Sinclair Broadcast Group's recent actions have illustrated the dangers to localismand democracy caused by media consolidation.

Sinclair uses the public airwaves free of charge, and the law requires that they serve the public interest. But when large companies control the airwaves, we get more of what's good for the bottom line and less of what we need for our democracy. Instead of something produced at "News Central" far away, it's more important that we see real people from our own communities and more substantive news about issues that matter. Showing one sided programs like "Stolen Honor" is a shameful example of how a broadcast goup can use their power to influence the election.

Sinclair's actions show why we need to strengthen media ownership rules, not weaken them. They show why the license renewal process needs to involve more than a returned postcard. Thank you.
